ing. When he put Reilly out of the game he did that which his position forced him to do. He is always fair, and the chances are that the decision which called forth the bisses and groans was correct. He was on the spot and had a clearer sight than the runner or the spectators. With all the abuse heaped upon him, he did his work transferred next week, when a first-cass umpire is needed. Emshe is one of President Young's star umpires, and the lovers of the game should not be too severe when his judgment does not meet their approval. DeMontreville was a great shortstop. In the fourth he trapped Clarke's grounder on the dead ron and nailed the fast sprinter at first. In the next inning his work electrified the whole audience. Pick-ering had singled and was caught napping on a sharp throw from Farrell to Tucker. Then Stafford singled. Werden followed with what looked a safe hit over second, but the agile infielder stopped the ball, fumbled it, grabbed it up, touched second, and a second later Thomas Tucker had the ball in a very sensational double bat, too, and gave Clarke a run for his
